

Your Website Score Report

41–70%

Your site has real gaps.

You've got the foundations in place, but there are specific gaps that are costing you enquiries every week. This report identifies exactly where you're losing clients and what to do about each one.

Social proof isn't positioned to close

THE GAP

You have reviews somewhere on your site — but they're not working hard enough because they're not in the right place at the right moment. Reviews buried three screens down are seen by a fraction of visitors.

THE FIX

Move your best Google review and star rating into the hero section. Add a second review near your primary CTA. The closer social proof is to the moment of decision, the more it converts.

CTAs aren't segmented by client type

THE GAP

You have calls to action, but they're the same for everyone. Self-employed applicants, first-time buyers, and landlords all have different triggers and objections. A single CTA leaves conversion on the table for each of them.

THE FIX

Add at least one segmented CTA pathway for your primary client type. If you specialise in self-employed cases, make that explicit with its own button, its own language, its own journey.

Booking friction is too high

THE GAP

Your site may have a contact form, but motivated clients want to book immediately — not fill in a form and wait. Every additional step between interest and contact loses a percentage of your audience.

THE FIX

Add a Calendly direct booking link as your primary CTA. Keep the contact form as a secondary option. The difference in conversion between 'fill out a form' and 'book a slot now' is significant.

FCA compliance isn't a trust signal

THE GAP

Your FCA details may be present in the footer, but they're not being used as a positive trust signal. Most visitors never see footer content.

THE FIX

Bring your FCA reference number out of the footer and into the nav or hero. Style it as a badge: 'FCA Authorised · Ref: XXXXXXXX'. This reassures clients and demonstrates regulatory confidence.

Mobile conversion isn't optimised

THE GAP

Your site works on mobile, but it may not convert on mobile. There's a difference between a site that displays correctly and one that's designed to convert a visitor who's browsing on their phone during a commute.

THE FIX

Audit every CTA on mobile. Are they full width? Easy to tap? Is your phone number clickable? Is the most important information visible without scrolling? Fix every friction point.
